High Swartz Attorneys to Speak at Montgomery Bar Association's Environmental Law Seminar

August 5, 2009, Norristown, PA — Kenneth R. Myers and Alan W. Flenner, attorneys with High Swartz LLP in Norristown, will be featured speakers at the Montgomery Bar Association's Environmental Law Seminar, to be held August 12 at the Montgomery Bar Association Building in Norristown. The seminar will focus on current energy issues and how they affect business and residential consumers.

Mr. Myers will serve as a panelist for the ethics portion of the Seminar, which will address a hypothetical situation that might occur during the course of representing building contractors and developers. Mr. Myers has represented developers, industrial clients, municipal bodies and associations in environmental matters, including air, water, solid waste and noise regulation. His publications include the original Pennsylvania Chapter of the Environmental Law Practice Guide (Matthew Bender), the original Environmental Spill Reporting Handbook (West Publishing), and articles on environmental and regulatory topics. He co-founded and managed the environmental law practice as a member of Morgan Lewis & Bockius, his prior firm.

Mr. Flenner will speak about "High Performance Building Regulations," including federal, state, and local incentives to encourage construction of energy efficient buildings and the incorporation of renewable and alternative energy sources in building designs. He concentrates his practice on matters associated with the built and natural environments including environmental, land use, and municipal law, and advises municipalities on local environmental regulation involving stormwater management, sustainable development, and green building issues. Mr. Flenner is the current Chair of the Environmental Law Committee of the Montgomery Bar Association and will serve as Moderator of the Environmental Law Seminar.
